

Volume 30 Issue 7/2009
ISSN 0144-3054

Contents

European Competition Law Review

Articles

KATHRYN WRIGHT

European Commission Interventions as Amicus Curiae in National Competition Cases: The Preliminary Reference in X BV 309

This article examines the competence of the European Commission to intervene as amicus curiae in national competition proceedings under art.15 of Regulation 1/2003, in light of the Advocate General's opinion in the Inspecteur van de Belastingdienst/X BV preliminary reference.

FRANCES MURPHY

Abuse of Regulatory Procedures—the AstraZeneca Case: Part 3 314

This is the third part of a three-part article examining abuse of regulatory procedures in the AstraZeneca case. This part will consider the issues raised by the Commission's decision in relation to the second of the two alleged abuses.

TJARDA VAN DER VIJVER AND LUKE KELLY

The French Beef case: Coop de France Bétail et Viande v Commission of the European Communities 324

This case followed a so-called “crisis cartel” that the Commission deemed anti-competitive by object. The ECJ's judgment contains interesting points regarding the level of fines on associations of undertakings and seems to adopt criteria proposed earlier by the CFI. Lastly, government intervention may justifiably lead to a substantially lower fine.

LAURA ELIZABETH JOHN

Standstill Periods in Awarding Part B Service Contracts: Federal Security Services Ltd v Chief Constable for the Police Service of Northern Ireland and Resources Group Ltd 329

The High Court of Northern Ireland holds that although Community law does not oblige procurers to provide a standstill period when awarding Part B service contracts, it may nonetheless require that such a period be provided in individual cases.

MAURICE DE VALOIS
TURK

The European Commission's Revised Remedies Notice—the Trustee's Perspective 332

This article considers the new Remedies Notice from the (economic) perspective of a monitoring trustee, and discusses the effectiveness of merger remedies and the role of the monitoring trustee using the pitfalls and risks of merger remedies identified in reports from other competition authorities.

PROFESSOR J.S.
KORTMANN AND
CH.R.A. SWAAK

The EC White Paper on Antitrust Damage Actions: Why the Member States are (Right to be) Less Than Enthusiastic 340

A recently leaked document suggests that the European Commission may press ahead with its plans to facilitate antitrust damage claims, as contemplated in the White Paper. The authors argue that it would be ill-advised for the Commission to ignore the legitimate concerns of the Member States and the European Parliament.

News Section

N-99